Illustrator Honorarium

Some children struggle with reading or listening. Having accurate, biblically sound pictures in our Sunday school curriculum can be especially important for those children.

The first thing children usually notice when they look at a Sunday school lesson is the illustration. These colorful pictures immediately give the child an idea of what the lesson will be about. The artwork helps them visualize the people and places of the Bible and how the concepts in the Bible apply to their life. The artwork also helps children who struggle with listening or reading to gain more from the lesson.

We are blessed to have a skilled illustrator, who is also a graduate of FLBC, working on our Level 2 (second grade) Sunday school curriculum. This artist works closely with Ambassador Publications to ensure that the artwork aligns with the Bible lesson. The illustrator reads the Bible text and written portion of each student lesson before creating the full-color artwork. The pictures are realistic. This helps our Sunday school students know that the Bible stories depict real people and that the Bible concepts can be applied to real people.

Please prayerfully consider supporting the artistic work of our talented illustrator, who is using her skills to help children better understand God’s Word. Our volunteer illustrator, who spends many hours on each picture, is creating 72 illustrations for our new Ten Commandments curriculum (24 illustrations per quarter). An honorarium gift of $500 per quarter would greatly encourage and support the creative work of our illustrator.
